There is, amid the dismal but really narmless abstractions of the impracticables, the shadow of a reaction against which bles, the shadow of a reaction against which the country has set its face; and, by the sid of this shadow, whipped up into the dimensions of a suspicion, the Radical leaders are enabled to give a revolutionary tone and bias to the most obvious and necessary and constitutional suggestions. On the other hand, moved by a morbid fear of reaction, the moderate Republicans are losing sight of the revolutionary tendencies and enginery of the Radical leaders. The Demogratic party is the handle to this irreligion, lack of real knowledge and enginery of the Radical leaders. We have stall times sought to represent the people of Kentucky truly, and we are sure that we represent them truest when we doff that highfalutin scotlimentality which characterized the spread-engleism of a past generation, and deal in matters which are likely to affect our present and our future as a civil community. The average Kentuckian, no matter what may be said to the contrary, is an eminently shrewd and discerning person. The people of Kentucky, thus made up, desire to be correctly advised of all that passes; and we shall so advise them. They desire to do what is right and are willing to make all proper sacrifice.

are willing to make all proper sacrifice. But they are not willing to sell out or be sold out; and they think, as we do, that sold out; and they think, as we do, that there is no need to be in too big a hurry just now. One thing can be relied on, we don't want any "foolishing." We shall carry our flag neither high nor low; we shall not scrape the skies with it, nor drag it through the mire. But, holding it in good fighting fashion, we shall expect it to be respected wherever it appears, whether it waves defiantly over the old line, or is carried into battle as a symbol of a united opposition to the oneman party and the

It occurs to us, therefore, that the Ciacinnati Commercial is not only exacting, but over-touched with party spirit for a journal so independent of party patroage and so free of the groveling and dirt-cating partian temperament. But we take it as representing a class of Northern people, and a great class, and are sensible of the significance of all it has to say. Before and a great class, and are sonsible of the significance of all it has to say. Before the war the danger that beset the Union was the solidarity of the South. Now the danger which besets the Constitution it the solidarity of the North. Thus, be-tween the two sections—egged on by the fools and the knaves—the free system on which we have been taught to set such fools and the knaves—the free symmetric which we have been taught to set such store may fall to the ground, to be succeeded by all we grew up to hate and fear, the ascendance of the military, commanded by one man.

floating vote, its chance drift amounts to a prejudice which will, for the present at all eventa, defy reason.

If this be so, the fact is chargeable to add leadership, rather than any normal defect in the structure of the Democratic party; for all parties are pretty much alike in their organization, and if the Democratic party should disband to-morrow its ingredients would pass into the political body which should succeed it. We hold labels more lightly than Senator Schurz; and, holding them lightly, we shall be contented, whatever happens to us in the future if certain laws, which are conceived. There is no denying it. To turn from the moral to the practical, how do our merchants expect to attract strangers here if, when they arrive, they are reduced to the necessity of playing cards or going to church or getting drunk? It might as well be admisted. There can not be a city without recreation of some sort. We have no art galleries, parks, or drives. We have but scanty libraries. We don't support our theaters except when they are occupied by negro ministrels and circus troupes. What can we expect? We have plenty of gambling-houses and prostitutes, and the local patronage sufficing for these, strangers have no inducement to come unless they wish to be fleeced.

These are truths and there is no denying them. We commit them to the reflection of readers and the consideration of puipits. If nothing better can be done the city had better take the matter in hand, build at theater at the public expense and endow it. Theaters are as necessary as rail-at sightful, a we entered the gandole, which is the only means of public or private conveyance in Venice, the drameses, of Venetian life was made known to us, and it was delightful.

In a gondola! Then "which were feet, the leads' is go or the under's breast?" What huxuy of mystary! What were of motion, what a satisfaction of rest, what a luring, notheless movement; what a seeme of secrecy and allence! From the darkness of the gondola, where you set setfly cusflored, you see the glumpes of noble and high-fowering forms, of domes, and columns, and arches, and apires; you pass marble steps, under beloonies, onter the profound gloom of the narrow canals, and the shadow of great palaces. And to what end but the unknown! Actually in Venice! and the very bloom of one's first impressions not marred by any foreign or disenchanting influence; but moonlight and mystery, and the great shapes of the great age of Venice on either side of you! Whithin the gondola is noiseleastly propelled by an unseen hand—for, as you know, the gondolier stands behind. Not a sound is heard, sare the occasional splash of the oas, and the gendolier's cry, which comes at intervals; you pass over the soft lapsing water, belween a long array of great palaces, which leads to great sundows, and not a figure is to be seen on the marble balconies, which we know are from three to save entargies out. Fou feet chilly and you shirer, half from fantastic fancies of death and time and the feeting life of feetive Venice which has an antimally begother in your strange situation; you are surprised at the descrete look of the palaces on the great and no fine and the feeting life of feetive in your strange situation; you are surprised at the descrete look of the palaces on the great and no fine and the feeting life of feetive venice which are attentially begother in your strange situation; you are surprised at the descrete look of the palaces, which land time and the feeting life of feetive venice which are attended on the great arch of the Risito, and in fifte WDODHULL.

if they had been closed for ages. Are these gray and silent, these black and ghoptly walls, all the superared so warm and beautiful jaths light of sanset! We have not yet reached the pectilar glory of Venice, the Doge's pales on the light of sanset! We have not yet reached the pectilar glory of Venice, the Doge's pales on the lattest glory of Venice, the Doge's pales on the lattest glory of Venice, the Doge's pales on the lattest, he gloomiest side of Bucal the plainer, and an analyse are not lattest, he gloomiest side of Bucal the plainer, and as passing under the bridge of sight; then we glide out into the lagoon, into the moonlight grain, and before we have had time to look about us, we are at the steps of our hotel, and are unhered from the magic and mystay of a goudola and Venice into the commonplace and the cosmostic, which are always found at the grain and proposed on this coesaion. For your hotel, ind are unhered from the magic and mystay of a goudola and Venice into the commonplace and the cosmoolitan, which are always found at the grain department of the world. But we are close to the far-famed square of 8t. Mark, and in a nimute, if you are avid of novelties after a dry fall of sensation, you can be on the plaze of 8t. Mark, and know the boast of Venice at night. The lagoon lies before the parex, it while breast throbbing under the moonlight; the one tower and dome of the listend church, 8t. Girgio, are but a short listence from where we stand, and the column of 8t. Mark throws its very shadow before us; on one side is the Gothic from the magic passed with great with grant opening the grain of the parex is the short of the grain of the stand, and the column of 8t. But this is not the leading and permanent fact, of one's impression of Venice in nate of venice. One's impression of Yearles is nated of a variety of harmonious and heautiful and delightful simultons the sensation which comes from exquisite akies, glorious stra-shins, and inserence of placed safer, and degant towers great white domes, and the op-ulence of every tint or color possible to con-brick and time-tinted white marble, sil the cys with colors which are duplicated by the levellest reflections in the gram water of the cannia. The stones of Verice, when not wholly blackened by time, are of the most lovely cream and rose tints, or appear in great masses of light warm gray, and near the water they are stained the decigest and releast of amber or the golden, olive green of sea-weed. Then the numerous tiles by recach doorway or palace step are of every color. They are painted in stripes, or twisted, or in strange figures; and last, but not least, the salts of the fishing boats of the Adriante are Venetian red and orbre yellow and white, with various signs or symbols painted in great figures upon them, such as hearts, and crosses, and olips, and horses, and curious signs unknown to us, which make the sails of the fishing-boats significant of religion or superstition like the painted whelds and embryothered breats of these cynasters. When the wind fills these sails and the various signs of the control the sails of these cynasters. When the wind of the sail of the sea on the Lide, the city wakes and sleeps and sleeps and wakes without noise for in Venice, with her one hundred and air thousand inhabitants, there are no horres and no carriages; instead of omnibuses on wheels and carriages, you have goodolas and barcas and fishing-boats—and Venice, even before one has seen the interiors of her palaces and churches, without her marvelous plantings, which have altracted lovers of art from all parts of the world, is a wonderful, a magical, an enchanting and unique city. But it is an italian city, and therefore is dirty, debased, soddening. Venice, in spite of her beauty, and spart from artistic interests, is perhaps the saddest city in the world. (From the New York Times, Nov. 21.)

We published on Saturday as official report of the camination of Mr. decourse absorber to the camination of Mr. decourse the fore the grand jury, respecting the conscient of Mr. decourse the forest hand the faminary frauds, of which Mr. Jones was understood to say that he knews on more than any other man alive, with the exceptions, perhaps, of Boas Tweed, and Capl. Mathew J. O'Rourke. Mr. Jones, our readers will not have failed to observe, knew nothing at all; and the painful suspicion was aroused that Mr. Jones and his newspaper, The Times, had all along been hitting in the dark. The Times assured us yesterday that, during the examination, a reporter in the pay of Mayor Hail was concealed in the grand jury room, either under the fabit, other convenient with great touther convenient of the first substantial of the present a much fuller and more accurate account of the great jones Hail-O'Ilver inquest than can be found in the official transcript of the evidence. Mr. Jones catered the room with a irm, quick step, and an air of profound mystery. Folding his arms, and looking at the jury from under his eyebrows, he was heard to mutter something about "Tammany tools," and to address the District Attorneys as "califit Thinin," at which acversal of the jurymen visibly shoot, and Judge Gravin reached or more real-familiand humanful.

Mayor had practically abdicated and green up the government of the city into the hands of the Sferidan, he wrote him elector censuring his course in the severest terms, and expressing the hope that he would at once resume his legal authority. The Mayor answered, in a tone rather of pethiance than severed in the severe of the severe of the severe with military had already occlored. Good intentions can not access yielsations of hw. The surrender of municipal authority into the hands of soid ears is an act of desperance. there was such a necessity existing in Chicago. On the 11th of October, at the hour when General Sheridan was giving the order for raising the irregular and unsorthorized regiment. From the control of the State was in Chicago, with over 500 disciplined men of the State militia, under skillful and trustworthy officers. It is true there was a good deal of wild talk of disorder and crime, of violence and inceediarism. But Gen. Sheridan himself has borne full and manly testimony to the falsity of these stories. There was no such emergency as required that dangerous precodent that grant jury of Cook county have refused to indict any one on account of the death of Col. Growrenor, it may be said that this is now a barren discussion. But it is dangerous to pass in allence any infraction of principles upon which our democracy reats.

In this case there was no harm intended. The Mayor of Chicago, induceded by the prevailing custiences and unconscious of the repossibility which was thus offered him with the best intentions, without inquiring, and probably without caring much what the law of the case was. But Governor Palmer could not be permitted to look with indifference upon a proceeding which contravened the

A Fine Portrait.

Mr. Frank Wybrant, the popular photographer, has just completed a work walch its a triumph of the photographic art. It is a large-sized likeness of the late Prof. B. R. Palmer, formerly an eminent surgeon of this city, well known toghe medical profession and a large number of our cittiens. At Prof. Palmer's death, in 1865, his family had no picture of him, but, after a diligent search through the galleries of the city, they found and obtained a daynerrotype taken some years before by Theo Harris. The present Prof. Palmer, anxious for a large picture of his lamented father, placed the old daynerrotype, how much faded, in the hands of Mr. Wybrant with instructions your for a large picture of his lamented father, placed the edd daguerrostype, now much faded, in the hands of Mr. Wybrant with instructions to do the bost he could to make from it a large and durable copy. The result is indeed a great triumph for Mr. Wybrant and his art. By dint of various processes, the fruits of the latest developments in photography, he has produced a most excellent and correct large-sized photograph, which has been finished in India int by Mr. A. C. Smith. It looks like a handsom steelessing, and has been finished in India int by mr. A. C. Smith. It looks like a handsom steelessing and has been finished in India into the window of Escott & Son, where lovers of art and those who desire to refresh their memory of this celebrated teacher and surgeon will have an opportunity of seeing it.

A Dummy in a Nuptial Chamber. A Dummy in a Nuptial Chamber. A laughable joke was played on the unapphisticated pair married by Justice McGrath, on Tuesday night, at the Falls City Brewery. The happy couple just made one lingered till a late hour in the sitting-room, and thus gave an opportunity to some mischier ous fellows to got up a black dummy, resembling a negro man, and place him in the bridal chamber. The bride retired first, and on entering her room, found, as she thought, a black man standing by the bed-sides. His intrusion roused her indignation to the highest pitch, and she few at the figure and

The result of this important negotiation has not transpired, but we should not be surprised if our new Barnums shortly give as the pleasure of sociang the vertisble Mrs. O'Leary milking the vertisble cow on the stage at Manonie Temple. If they can only succeed in coaxing the cow to give buttermilk, the speculation will be a grand success. It is proposed to effect this by running a small stern-wheel steamhoot down the animal's throat, and churning the milk before milking.

Topers' Temptation.

A new market-house has just been erected at the corner of Thiteesth and Wainut streets. A bottle of whisky being sent up to the brick mrs m while he was engaged on the walls, he left out one brick, and, after taking a drink, placed the lottle with the rest of the beverage in the vacant piace, where it will is. Half of it can be seen projecting from the hole, at once tempting and tantalizing the topers who pass the spot. A few feet distant a goblet is arranged in a similar way. It was the intention that these should not be removed unless perchance the building should be in danger of burning, but some thirsty sort will doubtless get hard up for a drink, and, promuring a ladder, climb up to the bottle under cover of darkness and enjoy its contents as the reward of his daring. It would not be a slight feat, however, as the prize is placed at the hi ht of about fifty feet. The place should be christened "Topers' Temptation."

The Coal Run.

The receipts of coal by the river yesterday cached the gratifying aggregate of, in round numbers, a million and a quarter of bushels. numbers, a million and a quarter of bushels. Some of this coal was started from Pitshurgh for points further South, but as it can not pass the fails we presume it may be regarded as on the market. Coal was seiling yesterday at $3 per load, or 30 cents per bushel, and we understand that this price is the result of a sort of insortial agreement among the dealers. Whether it can be sustained with the present stock on hand and the prospect of more coming remains to be seen. The coal-boatmen of Pitsburgh are.
